

Ten rectangles, a flat rate, and a wall between them and the grades.

isittrainingonme.com records which apps train AI models on their users' data, in the companies' own words, with an archived copy behind every quote. It carries ten paid notices. This page is everything a sponsor needs to decide.

WHO READS IT

People checking an app before they trust it with their data: the privacy-minded, developers, journalists, and the readers who arrive from Hacker News and from search for "does X train AI on my data". It is read in 96 countries, with the United States and the United Kingdom together most of the traffic.

Counted by the CDN while serving pages: a country and a number, nothing finer. Crawlers are mixed in and cannot be separated, so treat these as a ceiling. At 2.28 requests per page view, most visits are one page. We cannot tell you click-through or time on page, and we would rather say so here than in an invoice.

WHAT YOU GET

A rectangle: your name, one line you write, and a link. Five notices sit in each rail beside every page on desktop and in a ticker on phones, labelled "Paid notices" wherever they appear. Your colour is a keyline and a light wash, never a solid fill and never red, because red on this site means a grade.

THE TEN SLOTS

$1,000

FIRST 3 SLOTS, PER 30
DAYS; THEN $2,000

10 of 10

VACANT TODAY, FIRST COME

Every slot is the same product; the first three cost less only because they are first. The only difference between slot 1 and slot 10 is where on the page it sits. There is no tier, no bundle, and nothing a larger spend buys.

Founding rate: $1,000 a month for the first 3 sold, held while the notice runs; the rest are $2,000. Closes 13 October 2026 or on the third sale.

THE WALL

The price is the same whether we grade you A or F, and a notice buys nothing but the rectangle.

No grade has ever moved because a company complained, and none will because one paid. Every grade quotes the company's own policy against an archived copy, and every unfavourable one goes to the company for reply before it is published.

Sponsors are told how many page views the site had. They are never told anything about who saw it, because that is not known.

HOW TO TAKE A SLOT

Choose a slot at isittrainingonme.com/advertise and pay by card. Send the name, the line and the link to contact@isittrainingonme.com; the notice goes up on the next build, normally within a day, and comes down by itself when the 30 days end.
